Travis DeSa, MD

Fellowship: General Cardiology – Baylor University

Residency: Internal Medicine – Loyola Medical Center

Medical School: North Western University

I went to college at the University of California – Berkeley before heading to the Midwest for medical school at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine in Chicago. My interests in interventional cardiology include bifurcation lesions, intravascular imaging, and coronary physiology. I am also interested in structural heart and valvular interventions. Outside of work, I enjoy dinner with friends at a nice restaurant downtown or a walk outside in the sunshine with a gentle breeze. I am excited for all the landscapes and scenery that Arizona has to offer. I am also an avid chef and make dishes from various cultures and cuisines. To get the circulation going, I head to the tennis court.

I was drawn to HonorHealth because the interventional cardiologists employ a contemporary approach to percutaneous coronary intervention in a complex subset of patients and have access to the most cutting-edge technologies in the field. The program is committed to inquiry and advancing the field of interventional cardiology, as evidenced by its involvement in the Scottsdale Interventional Forum, one of the preeminent interventional conferences in the country. Finally, the cardiologists at HonorHealth value the importance of education and mentorship for fellows to develop and thrive.
